

Five Simple Ways to Reduce Your Support Load

Herman Kok
Happiness Engineer
@kokkieh

Which WordPress?

Where to ask for help

I have had a template designed and we are struggling to import it

Domains, Sites, Registrars and Hosts

Navigating the Jargon

I have my own domain name and email address but wanted to make a site on WordPress for my artwork. I noticed that you can use your own domain name, for example, "mysite.com" for $13 per year. If I go with this will it need to be hosted by the company where I got my domain or just use the domain mapping?

I have little experience with designing websites and love my WordPress blog so I want to keep my new site simple.

Help! I can't access my site

The Top-Two Questions

Hello.

I had a functioning website (www.pinkdressing.com). I wanted to see if I could change the domain to a different name and went into my settings and changed the domain on the settings to www.pinkdressing.com. This was a mistake because I had not validated or bought that domain. Unfortunately, I do not know how to return it to <http://www.pinkdressing.com> so that I can access the site... I can sign in to wordpress, but I cannot get to the website options.

After not logging in for a month, I tried to but couldn't - even though I didn't change my password. When I try to reset the password, my email address seems to be correct and I get the message I will receive an email. But however I don't receive this email, also checked by spam folder and tried to reset several times. What could have happened and does anyone know if there's another way to get in contact with WordPress customer service?

Help! I've been hacked!

The importance of updates, security and backups

A·kis·met

Keep it simple

Sometimes WordPress.com
will do the trick

 WordPress.com

@kokkieh

kokkieh.wordpress.com